In this second, revised and extended edition the evolution of emerging Europe is analyzed against the background of major changes in the constitutional, fiscal, regional and neighborhood policies of the European Union. The basic points of reference remain, as in the first edition, the global economy and institutionally informed standard economic theory. The book, which in part, or in its entirety, is suited for a textbook, is oriented not only for classroom use, but towards a broad international audience of academics, policy advisors and informed intellectuals with an interest in central and eastern Europe and development in general.

From the recent echo of the first edition

"The book addresses fundamental issues of the post-transition economies. The conclusions are clear and to the point"

Jacques de Laroisere, former Managing Director of the IMF, advisor to the president of BNP Paribas, Paris

"It is a great value of this book that, while rejecting the temptingly simple and fashionable suggestions, still it convinces the reader that there are, indeed, meaningful answers to the question it raises"

Prof. Alexandre Lamfalussy, Université Catholique de Louvain/Belgium and former President of the European Monetary Institute, Frankfurt/Germany

"Overall, this is an extremely useful book for trying to understand post-socialist transformation, development economics, Chinese and Russian puzzles and the European enlargement".

"The author does not attempt to refute mainstream economics, but complements it with institutional insights. paving the way towards a new synthesis in development studies"
